Money's too tight to mention at factory

■ SLEEP-TITE AND THE BILLS WON'T BITE: A scene from Worthing Light Opera's The Pajama Game, above

WORTHING Light Opera Company is back for the spring season at the Pavilion Theatre, Worthing, with The Pajama Game.

The romantic musical comedy is set in mid-west America during the 1950s and was originally made famous by Doris Day, who starred as Babe Williams in the film version.

The story is about the conflict over pay between the workers and the management of The Sleep-Tite Pajama Factory.

For this production, the company has been put through their paces with a new production team, director Michael Edgley, choreographer Sherry Lorraine and also musical director Ian White.

The cast is led by Steve Wallace as Sid Sorokin, the new factory superintendent and Pam Stringer as Babe Williams, head of the grievance committee.

The play runs from March 19 to 22. Call the Pavilion Theatre box office on 01903 206206.

Worthing Light Opera Company would like to thank Charles Kirk factory and Montagues restaurant for their assistance with the photos.
